

Have you had a chance to sink your hands into some fresh snow this year?

Whether you've had your fill of that glorious white stuff or you haven't even seen a flurry this winter, you will surely enjoy this craft. And the kids will too! We're talking about DIY snow. And we haven't even shared the best part yet; you can play with this stuff as long as you want without having to thaw out cold hands. We made this recipe in our Western Chief office and had a blast. You only need a couple ingredients, and it takes less than 10 minutes to make. Read on to discover what you'll need for this fun DIY project!

Ingredients:

32 oz of baking soda

10 oz can of shaving cream

Large plastic container for mixing

A pinch of imagination

Directions:

1. Dump your baking soda into the plastic container
2. Squirt a mound of shaving cream on top of your baking soda, roll up your sleeves, and dig in.
3. Mix until the snow is crumbly and resembles the texture you're looking for.
4. Add more shaving cream as needed!

That's it. Enjoy playing with snow inside for a change!
